Reference: Leadership Skills Assessment (LSA)

Dear Mr. Quinones:

The Leadership Skills Assessment, 14 level (LSA 14) is the first hurdle for the Special Agent Mid-level Management Selection System (SAMMSS). This assessment has been designed to identify those candidates who currently meet minimum standards for management selection, while providing all candidates written feedback about their strengths and weaknesses in various dimensions that are important to success in FBI Special Agent manager positions.

I am pleased to advise that your performance on the LSA 14 qualifies you to apply for any GS-14 position within the FBI for which you are otherwise qualified. Although you may choose to share information regarding your performance on the LSA with other individuals, and are encouraged to discuss your developmental needs with your superiors, information concerning your LSA performance will not be disseminated outside of the EDSP. Should you desire additional feedback on your performance, you may address your request to the 'HQ_DIV03_SAMMU-LSA_FEEDBACK' Outlook E-mail address. Individuals who did not pass the LSA will be given higher prioritization in handling requests for feedback. Additional information concerning the SAMMSS can be found on the FBI Intranet at the Special Agent Mid-level Management Unit website.

Dear Special Agent Quinones:

The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC) is pleased to award you this Certificate of Achievement for your dedication to the welfare of children. We learned of your exceptional work in the case concerning Kenneth Leight and Mariam Jass through U.S. Attorney Michael J. Since May 1996, these awards have served to distinguish exceptional law-enforcement professionals who have worked tirelessly to find missing children, fight child exploitation, and capture dangerous predators.

Competition for these national awards is always high. Though other cases received this year's awards, we want you to know that we recognize your hard work and compassion on behalf of the children and the families you have affected.
