Condé Nast Traveler

Cuban Coffee Queen is a lively counter-service joint in the heart of town, ideal for passing a weekend morning and enjoying some sunshine. Although its name might seem to imply morning caffeinated beverages only, it's actually an all-day hot spot with classic Cuban coffee drinks like cafe con leche and the Cuban Queen mix—and both are completely worth the trip. The food options are limited, but it doesn't matter: All you need to know about are the Cuban sammies and guava pastelitos.

KEY WEST: SEE SUNSET FROM THE WATER

As early the 1960s, hippies in Key West had turned watching the daily sunset into a celebration on Mallory Square. Sunset cruises weren't far behind.

The Historic Key West Seaport has about a dozen sunset cruises available. You'll want to search reviews on TripAdvisor to see which one matches your style and pocketbook. Some are priced for people celebrating special occasions; others are doing a higher volume/lower price business.

The yacht called the Party Cat promotes itself as the least expensive sunset cruise at $40 per person. Beer and soft drinks are included plus music and dancing. (sunsetwatersports.info)

The pirate-theme Jolly II Rover, an 80-foot schooner with jaunty red sails, is $65 and is BYOB. It's a two-hour tour. (schoonertjollyrover.com)

Key West Bight Marina & the Super Boat International Races

Founded in 1989, the Super Boat International Races are the largest and fastest offshore racing series in the world. Attracting numerous racers throughout the years, this annual race has seen some of the biggest names in entertainment — Don Johnson, Kurt Russell and Chuck Norris. This elite national and international racing course is rectangular shaped and is five miles in length where boats power through at speeds of up to 180 mph. With its massive fanbase and the most popular television production crews in tow, 2019's Super Boat International Race is predicted to be the biggest year yet.

With the Key West Bight Marina being one of the most sought after marinas in all of Key West, our marina fills up quickly during the holiday season and throughout the SBI racing series. Making your reservations early will not only ensure your spot at the Bight Marina but it will also give you plenty of time to make your accommodations when
