The Diana Nyad Project

On the morning of August 31, 2013, Diana Nyad swam from Cuba to Key West Florida, a distance of about 110 miles swimming without a shark cage but protected from jellyfish by a silicone mask, a full bodysuit, gloves and booties. She was accompanied by 35 team members, including navigators, managers, boat crew, weather routers, medical personnel, and shark experts. Nyad was also escorted by two paddlers in a kayaks equipped with an electronic shark shield. To keep Nyad swimming in a straight line, her specially designed, slow-moving catamaran support boat deployed a 10-foot (3.0 m) streamer: a long pole keeps the streamer several yards away from the boat, and the streamer is designed to remain about 5 feet underwater, so that Nyad can swim above it, much like following a lane line in a swimming pool. At night, the white streamer was replaced by a string of red LED lights. At approximately 1:55 pm EDT on September 2, 2013, Nyad reached Smathers beach in Key West, about 53 hours after she began her journey.

This was Diana Nyad's fifth attempt at the historic swim. Previous attempts at the swim were thwarted by a variety of problems.

"So many times I conjured the Florida beach, the palm trees, to get me through the hundreds of long, grueling training swims. Four times, in the previous attempts at the crossing from Cuba to Florida---be it otherworldly Box Jellyfish stings or a screeching Easterly Gulf Stream or roiling eddies spinning our boats' compasses in full circles or sustained sudden summer storms with life-threatening lightning and 45-mph winds---we were forced to abandon the beautiful Dream.... Diana Nyad

The City of Key West would like to memorialize this historic swim by creating a monument honoring Diana Nyad which will be placed in a prominent place in the city of Key West. In addition the city will place a plaque at Smathers Beach commemorating her swim.

DIANA NYAD

Nyad was born in New York City on August 22, 1949, to stockbroker William L. Sneed Jr. and his wife Lucy Winslow Curtis (1925-2007). The Sneeds divorced in 1952, after which Lucy Sneed married Aristotle Z. Nyad, a Greek-Egyptian land developer, who adopted Diana and the family moved to Fort Lauderdale, Florida, where she began swimming seriously in seventh grade. She attended Pine Crest School, swimming under the tutelage of Olympian and Hall of Fame coach Jack Nelson. She won three Florida state high school championships in the backstroke at 100 and 200 yards. She dreamed of swimming in the 1968 Summer Olympics, but in 1966 she spent three months in bed with endocarditis, an infection of the heart, and when she began swimming again she had lost speed.

Nyad graduated from Lake Forest College in Illinois with a degree in English and French. She played tennis for the Foresters and resumed swimming, concentrating on distance events. After graduating from college, she trained with Buck Dawson, director of the International Swimming Hall of Fame in Florida, who introduced her to marathon swimming.

Nyad has authored three books, Other Shores (Random House: September 1978) about her life and distance swimming, Basic Training for Women (Harmony Books: 1981), and in 1999 she wrote a biography of an NFL wide-receiver Boss of Me: The Keyshawn Johnson Story. She has also written for The New York Times, Newsweek magazine, and numerous other publications.

Nyad hosted the public radio program "The Savvy Traveler." She was a long-time weekly contributor to National Public Radio's afternoon news show All Things Considered. She was also a regular contributor to the CBS News television show Sunday Morning.

Nyad was inducted into the United States National Women's Sports Hall of Fame in 1986. She is also an International Marathon Swimming Hall of Fame Honoree (1978) and an ISHOF Al Schoenfield Media Award recipient (2002). She is a Hall of Famer at both her college, Lake Forest College in Illinois and at her high school, Pine Crest School in Fort Lauderdale.

An independently produced documentary film, The Other Shore, was released in early 2013, some months before Nyad's first successful swim from Cuba to Florida.

Distance Swimming Records

- 1974: In June 1974, Nyad set a women's record of 8 hours, 11 minutes in the 22-mile (35 km) Bay of Naples race.
- 1975: At age 26, Nyad made national headlines by swimming 28 miles (45 km) around the island of Manhattan (New York City) in just under 8 hours (7 hours 57 minutes.)
- 1978: At age 28 she first attempted to swim from Havana, Cuba to Key West, one year after the Kennedy-era travel restrictions were lifted. Diving into the ocean at 2PM on Sunday August 13 from Ortegosa Beach (50 miles (80 km) west of Havana), she swam inside a 20 × 40-foot (6 × 12

m) steel shark cage for nearly 42 hours, before team doctors removed her during the 7 o'clock hour on the morning of Tuesday August 15 due to strong Westerly winds and 8-foot (2.4 m) swells that were slamming her against the cage and pushing her off-course towards Texas. She had covered about 76 miles (122 km), but not in a straight line.

- 1979: In what was to be her last "competitive" swim on her 30th birthday (August 21–22, 1979), she set a world record for distance swimming (both men and women) over open water by swimming 102.5 miles (164 km) from North Bimini Island, Bahamas, to Juno Beach, Florida (without the use of protective shark cage). Thanks to favorable winds and a following sea she averaged 3.7 miles per hour (6.0 km/h) and completed the swim in 27 and one-half hours.
- 2013: At 64 years old, Diana Nyad became the first person to swim without a shark cage from Cuba to the United States. The 103 mile swim took Nyad 53 hours. It was her fifth attempt.
