CAMPAIGN OVERVIEW

CURRENTLY: The current digital campaign has run from March 1 to March 31 and is built as an awareness campaign. As such it's job is to bring higher presence of mind of the Historic Seaport to the targeted audience- cruise ship passengers. This segment was chosen in order to market to tourists who spend the most money on the island in the shortest amount of time. Since these passengers arrive in bulk all at the same location, they can be geo targeted much more precisely than hotel guests or other types of travellers.

We launched the campaign by setting a 1 km radius around a pin that was digitally placed at the end of the pier. This gives us the ability to reach both piers with very little bleed over into land-based viewers. We use the Caribe Nautical Cruise Ship Schedule to align campaign schedules with dockings and keep the campaign up for the first 4-5 hours of visits, assuming that towards the end of the visit, people are otherwise engaged or are returning to the ship.

< SHOWN- Radial targeting in Key West

Image ads that are cruise line specific speak to the passengers through intense rotations through millions of websites in Google's ad network. These are offered in multiple sizes and content is based on bars and restaurants, attractions, adventures and shopping.

As the campaign data began to flow, we were pleased to see that the costs/thousand impressions (CPM) was extremely low, which allowed us to expand the campaign with a second strategy: ports of departure. With that, we launched campaigns in the ports of Tampa, Miami and Fort Lauderdale, again with a radius that almost exclusively reached the piers. These campaigns serve ads to passengers on the afternoon/night before they depart as they wrap up their mobile phone use before reaching international waters. Message talks to them as passengers who will be in Key West the next day, extending an advanced welcome to Key West and the Seaport.

SHOWN- Radial targeting in Port Miami >

PLANNED: We anticipate launching a more retail-directed campaign through extensive discounting which will allow us to collect user information and text them with special offers. At this point, we have not received an adequate participation from merchants to make those offers the kind of magnet that we need to be effective. We continue to work to build that, and once we have it, can then provide metrics on coupon redemptions, etc. that can provide additional measures of success.

In the meanwhile, as an awareness campaign, we are very pleased with the results to date and know that they exceed other forms of awareness advertising. The low cost that we have experienced allows us to also anticipate opening campaign strategies to reach other visitor segments, which behave very differently. Additionally, geo targeted social media integration and retail-directed campaigns will take place in April and May 2017.

KPIs From Summary Chart:

Cost: (Advertising only. Not including account management, creative, set up fees.) $184.81

Cost/thousand impressions: $1.33

Impressions: 139,203

Clicks: 181

Average cost/click: $1.02

Average position: 1.0

Notes on KPIs:

1. Cost/thousand impressions is extremely low, especially compared with other advertising formats. Radio, for instance, often has a CPM of $20-$25. Considering that the impressions we are making are so highly targeted (and all valuable to us), this is an outstanding value.
2. Impressions/day: Our average is 4,640 impressions/day. Compared to the average number of cruise visitors each day, this is an extremely high penetration level.

BUDGET: 97.36% of March's budget is available and we will be carried over to the following month.

CREATIVE EXECUTIONS: There are 11 campaigns, each with different ad groups that track the area of interest, (bars and restaurants, shopping, attractions or adventures). Of these 11, three are departure campaigns, shown before the ship leaves Miami, Tampa or Fort Lauderdale. A total of 76 ads are in rotation, in several different sizes. A cross-section of the ads is shown below:

CRUISE LINE ADS (shown at the Port of Key West)
