2013 USA Review with Azam Rangoonwala

P1 USA championship manager Azam Rangoonwala looks back at this season's SuperStock race series ahead of the final round next month

What were your thoughts and aims at the start of the season?

I was both excited and a little nervous as we were introducing four new race venues and also launching the P1 AquaX jet ski series in the United States. My principal aims were to increase the size of the SuperStock fleet, secure new boat sponsors and take a successful first step on the journey towards building AquaX into an international race series with real credibility. AquaX has become a firm favourite with jet ski riders and watersports fans in the UK and we want to repeat that here in the USA.

What has been the most memorable moment of the season?

That has to be watching the CL-Alpha team finish all the races at the Space Coast event in August despite serious engine problems that reduced their speed by 10 mph. I just loved their sheer determination and commitment to the series.

What was the low point for you?

The cancellation of the SuperStock racing at Daytona Beach in June was a huge disappointment. It is a mecca for motorsport and the teams were so looking forward to racing there, but the rough seas were the winner that weekend. On a positive note, we rescheduled all the races for the next round at Pahokee and enjoyed a feast of racing on Lake Okeechobee (where thankfully the alligators and manatees all behaved themselves over the weekend).

What's the strangest thing about this year's racing?

When it comes to our teams, the SuperStock championship is very much a family affair with four father-and-son crews, two husband-and-wife teams and even an engaged couple racing together. I believe that family duos often do well in sport because of their high level of compatibility and mutual understanding. There are examples of successful family pairings in a number of sports such as tennis and rowing, and these combinations are particularly suited to high-speed powerboat racing, where quick and effective communication between the pilot and throttleman is essential. The family theme carries through to our live audience, with SuperStock racing providing superb family entertainment.

In your opinion, what have been the outstanding team and individual racer performances so far this season?

My vote goes to Team Livorsi. The husband-and-wife pairing of Craig and Cynthia Belfatto, newcomers to SuperStock this year, recorded their first win in Pahokee and then went on to notch up a second victory that weekend. It was good to see all their hard work and practice being rewarded.

For me, the outstanding racer this season has been Jason Morton. He had to change his throttleman mid-season but continued to perform well and his Morton Water boat is still challenging for the SuperStock title. Look out for Jason in the final round next month!

What has pleased you most this season?

The most gratifying aspect is seeing what a great job the P1 safety team does at our race events. Safety, of course, is of paramount importance to me as the championship manager and Mark Austin, our safety & medical director, and his team work to the very highest standards.

Tell us about the climax to the season next month.

St. Cloud was our opening event last season and this year it will host the finale of both the SuperStock and AquaX championships on the weekend of 16/17 November. We will have our biggest fleet ever, with 9 Panther race boats and more than 25 AquaX riders on the water. We've received tremendous support from St. Cloud and we will also be staging our P1 USA Annual Awards there. I'm counting down the days to what will be a superb weekend of sport and entertainment.

Dear Mr. Stephens,
Thank you for your message. I do not foresee any conflicts for the proposed Key West race course. It is outside of FKNMS protected zones and from what I can tell does not intersect with any state parks or other federal managed areas.

Please provide a completed NOAA application form (blank forms attached) as the time approaches, along with a current insurance certificate. We will process this in the same manner as the Islamorada event.

Thank you,
Joanne
