1Q20 Equity Commentary

The first guarter of 2020 witnessed market movements and economic events that none of us have ever witnessed before. After establishing a new all time high for the market in late February, we then proceeded straight into a bear market in the shortest time frame since the Great Depression, with the market falling 35% from peak to trough over a mere 23 trading days. The culprit was two pronged, with the Covid 19 pandemic, and the oil supply shock initiated by Russia and the Saudis. The pandemic resulted in an unprecedented shut down of economic activity, impacting roughly 92% of global GDP. In the coming weeks we will see economic numbers that previously were unthinkable. Just this week the US recorded 6.6 million initial unemployment claims (up from almost 3.3 million last week), as employers in industries such as retail, travel and leisure, and food service had no choice but to release workers. The multi decade low unemployment rate of 3.5% is now destined to rise to near double digits or greater in the next few months. We would not be shocked to see GDP for the second quarter contract at a 10% or greater rate, with some estimates as high as 34%. The uncertainties related to the pandemic are many. How long will the near total shutdown of the economy last? Will parts of the country be able to return to work on a limited basis? We don't have the answers to those questions, and expect those to be dictated by progress on the healthcare front as containment measures prove to be successful, or as therapeutic remedies are found. Regardless, the US economy will come back. We expect improvement to begin in the third quarter, with a more dramatic improvement in Q4.

Why is this different from the financial crisis in 2008?

First, this is a public health issue and not an issue emanating from the financial markets or the economy. The economy was strong prior to the onset of Covid 19, and the ensuing slowdown in the economy has been due to government fiat to stop the spread of the virus. Yes, many companies have and will experience liquidity issues as a result. Some could lead to solvency issues, but most should not given the quick actions taken by the government. In effect, the lessons learned by the Federal Reserve and our Congressional leaders during the 2008 Financial Crisis have been instrumental in responding to this crisis, ensuring that it doesn't develop into anything more than a sharp, and hopefully brief recession. The Fed has provided liquidity within the fixed income markets by instituting facilities to stand behind money market mutual funds, commercial paper, and investment grade bonds. This helps to support the flow of credit to households and businesses. In addition, the Fed has lowered reserve requirements on banks and lowered short term rates to near zero to encourage lending in the financial system. The US Congress has acted responsibly through fiscal measures to (1) provide emergency supplemental funding in the amount of $8.3 billion for federal agencies to respond to the outbreak, (2) enhanced the safety net provisions for paid sick and family leave, better unemployment benefits, aid to states for Medicaid, free virus testing, and lowered restrictions on food stamps, and (3) Congress has passed a $2 trillion relief package aimed at providing even more support for public health ($153B), local and state governments ($339B), individuals ($560B), small business ($377B), and big corporations ($500B).

1Q20 Equity Commentary

To say that the Federal government has fired a bazooka at the problem would be an understatement: its more like a nuclear missile. And even as the ink was drying on the recent legislation, Congressional leaders were already talking about the possibility of yet another aid package if needed. In short, helicopter money has arrived, and while there are numerous debates as to the long term impacts on debt, inflation, and interest rates, we will save that for another day. The Fed and the US Government have committed to do whatever is necessary to bridge the gap for the American worker and business to get beyond the pandemic.

First Quarter Market Recap:

The S&P dropped 19.6 % in the first quarter of 2020 making this the worst first guarter in history, and the biggest guarterly loss since 2008. The five day rally experienced near guarter end of 17.4% was the second best five day rally in history. The best performing sector for the quarter was Technology which fell by 12.2%. It seems that the trend of what was working or not working going into the market downdraft continued. Defensive sectors like Healthcare and Consumer Staples lived up to their billing falling 13.1% and 13.4% respectively. Healthcare seems to have generated more investor appreciation given the urgent needs for therapeutic treatments and vaccine development. The most economically sensitive areas such as Energy and Financials were the worst performing sectors, with Energy down 51.1%, and Financials off 32.3%. Energy was crushed in a very short time as it suffered the dual hits of demand destruction as economies shut down (estimated demand destruction of 20+ million barrels per day), along with an ill timed price war between Russia and Saudi Arabia that saw oil prices drop 60% from the end of their failed March 6th meeting. Financials also suffered in the quarter as lower interest rates will negatively impact margins, and loan losses are set to rise as the economy enters recession.

Outlook:

So where do we go from here since we are in unchartered territory? We expect both the market and the economy to bounce back. However, we don't know when and to what extent. Our thought is that the strength of the recovery and the market rebound will be inversely proportional to the time it takes to contain the virus. The longer it takes to contain the virus the weaker the recovery, the shorter the time frame to control the outbreak the stronger the rebound. With the market declining 35% from its peak, the decline is very much in line with the long term bear market average declines of 38%. The end of March bounce of 17.9% was welcome, but also indicative of a deeply oversold market that had witnessed indiscriminate selling in order to raise liquidity. Rallies like this are not unusual in a bear market, and history tells us that after this type of rally the market is usually higher by almost 10% over the next 125 days, and up by 24% over the next 240 days. The market could still retest the lows of March 23, as market bottoms are usually a process and require time to complete. With economic numbers that will be extremely weak over the next several months we expect volatility to remain elevated, but to calm as rates of new infection plateau. In many respects we are all flying blind as this is an unprecedented scenario with a near total shut down of global economic activity.

1Q20 Equity Commentary

We do know that it will end, its just the timing that's uncertain. The global healthcare community is working tirelessly to develop tests, vaccines, antibodies, and therapies that will help to treat and prevent future outbreaks. Our bet is on scientific innovation to succeed. Covid 19 may or may not be slowed by warmer weather, might come back in the fall or winter, and could become another seasonal strain . But regardless, the next iteration of this virus will be met with better preparation, treatments, and protocols that will

Valuation and Portfolio Positioning:

Valuation is tough to determine when you don't what the earnings are likely to be. That's the position all of us find ourselves in at present. The current consensus numbers for 2020 earnings have come down from an expected increase of 9.2% at December 31, to a decline of 1.2% as of last week. We think that number will probably move lower as more companies withdraw earnings guidance. Again, the timing of the shut down is the critical unknown element. The market valuation using the current consensus earnings has the market selling at 15.5X earnings, almost in line with the 10 year average of 15X, and below the five year average of 16.7X. However, that multiple rises to almost 18X if S&P earnings come in at $140 for 2020. The use of valuation metrics at this point is somewhat spurious. So what is our portfolio approach in a period like this?? For long term investors the market pullback provides opportunities. High quality companies that were previously too expensive to purchase are now attractive. It's a chance to upgrade holdings in the portfolios. We know from experience that quality usually wins in the long term, and typically bounces back faster. While defensive sectors have worked in the pullback, it might be time to trim some of those positions. As we look ahead to the recovery (and it will come), more cyclical sectors and names will become leaders as the market moves to a less defensive posture. This can be a delicate balancing act with the current level of volatility, but one that we believe makes sense.

At Highland we have always taken a long term approach to investing. Since our inception in 1987 we have endured the market crash in October of that year, the Iraq war, foreign sovereign defaults, a tech market bubble, a US debt downgrade, the Great Financial Crisis, and many other "crises" that were important at the time, but not worth mentioning now. The market has always moved on to new highs. We will come through this crisis as well, and quality holdings that are beaten down today will recover nicely over time. These periods of market upheaval can be disquieting. But calm, rational behavior is what is required. We are here to assist you in any way, and to answer your questions. We appreciate the opportunity to serve you, and value the trust and confidence that you have placed in us. Stay safe and well.

1Q20 Large Cap Value Equity Commentary

First quarter performance was disappointing to us who would have expected "value" to hold up better during a broad market sell off like we witnessed. Nonetheless, the persistent pattern of "growth" bettering "value" continued as detailed in this graph comparing the two styles.

1Q20 Large Cap Value Equity Commentary

Drilling down further, the lack of downside protection of the "value" style is shown here by comparing returns by Price to Book value deciles.

The overwhelming majority of the time during the business cycle, there is investment uncertainty concerning where we are and where we are heading next. During long expansions, attention surrounds how long the advance can last and how high it will get. At tops, the discussion typically turns to factors that will serve to support a permanent new high. As the cycle slows, investors argue whether the expansion is over or whether it represents an economic pause supporting a "buy the dip" opportunity. All of these points covering the typical cycle are fraught with uncertainty about how to structure investment portfolios to take advantage. Yet there is one and only one time during the cycle that there are no doubts about where one is and what will follow and that is during recessions like we are in today.

Historically, new leadership emerges out of US recessions and we would look forward to the emergence of companies more cyclically tied to the recovery of the economy for the next leg up in the market. We believe it likely that this move to come will act to close the performance gap between Growth and Value styles as it has done in the past. Our portfolios are structured to take advantage of such a rotation by overweighting industrials, select energy and consumer discretionary sectors of the index.

1Q20 Fixed Income Portfolio Manager Commentary

What didn't the Federal Reserve announce over the past thirty days? Here is a quick review of the monumental stimulus/liquidity being provided to the market by the Federal Reserve:

- On March 3rd, the Federal Reserve announced the first emergency cut to interest rates since 2008. A 50 basis point reduction to short term interest rates.
- On Sunday March 14th, the Fed announced another emergency rate cut. This time dropping interest rates by a full 1% bringing the rate to essentially 0%. Additionally, they announced a bond buying program ($700 billion in Treasuries and $200 billion in agency mortgage-backed securities).
- On Monday March 23rd, the Fed announced essentially unlimited quantitative easing (purchasing of bonds) in order to calm financial markets. The Fed dramatically expanded a bond buying program that was announced just eight days ago.
  - o The other major initiative announced on the 23rd was the Federal Reserve would also start purchasing investment grade corporate bonds. Purchasing investment grade corporate bonds has been adopted by other central banks, however this was the first endeavor for the United States.
  - o The program will last until September 2020 and is attempting to calm the stressed credit markets.
  - o The Federal Reserve Bank of New York hired Blackrock to purchase bonds on the Fed's behalf.

The above actions are the major initiatives announced by the Federal Reserve; however, the full list is much longer and probably will evolve over the coming quarters as the virus could impact other markets. The Fed is not acting alone in this stimulus, as during March we also saw major initiatives announced in Japan, Canada, Europe and China to name a few. Neel Kashkari, the President of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, gave an informative interview on March 22nd noting how aggressive the Fed will be during this time of market stress. Mr. Kashkari was an instrumental Treasury official during the 2008 financial crisis and helped formulate a plan to save the banks. Here is Mr. Kashkari stating what the Fed has done and will do in order to bring market stability...."We're being very aggressive. And I think our chairman, Jay Powell, has learned from the experience of 2008.

We're moving much faster than we moved in 2008. We're being more aggressive. Is there more we can do? Yes. Is there more we may end up doing? Yes. But I think we're being very aggressive. I think that's the right thing."

Risk assets not only performed poorly in the stock market during the quarter, but that also carried over into the bond market. Investors only had a couple of places to hide and preserve money during the quarter.....most notably Treasury bonds. As investors rushed to sell assets, investment managers were forced to sell the most liquid securities in the market which forced those values down in price. During the week of March 16th, the bond market faced a spike in volatility, massive liquidations from mutual funds and investors being forced to sell into a completely illiquid market.

1Q20 Fixed Income Portfolio Manager Commentary

To put this into perspective, liquidity was poor in every market including the United States Treasury market. We trade Treasuries electronically, and in the past these markets were efficient and liquid. However, during the week of March 16th we noticed dealers stepping away from the Treasury market and the bid/ask spread on Treasuries was over 10 times wider than prior periods. Large bond ETF's traded at a steep discount to the net asset value as sellers outpaced any demand in the market. For example, on March 12th, the iShares Core US Aggregate ETF traded at a 4.4% discount to NAV, a distinct difference from the five-year average (0.04% premium). Investor outflows in the municipal bond market were the most pronounced.

Retail investors pulled over $10 billion from the market in three straight weeks. During the week of March 18th, municipal bonds experienced $19 billion in outflows the previous weekly high before March was only $4.5 billion. Where did the money go during this spike in volatility...US government money-market funds. During the week of March 16th, investors poured a record $249 billion into government money market funds which now yield approximately 10 basis points and is probably headed lower. This outflow from both corporate and muni funds created great opportunities for investors with cash. For example, during this heightened volatility investors were able to buy pre-refunded municipal bonds at yields that exceeded Treasuries by approximately 2.5%. As a reminder, these are bonds that are backed by Treasuries and the security has zero credit risk. These are the type of inefficiencies that were created during this mad scramble for cash. Fortunately within the Cares Act, $150 billion will be allocated to state and city governments in order to address expenses incurred to deal with the coronavirus public health emergency. Additionally, a bill introduced in the Senate would amend the Federal Reserve Act to allow the Fed to purchase municipal bonds as well.

The 2 year Treasury started the year at 1.58% and ended the quarter yielding only 0.23%. During the month of March, the 2 year bond declined 67 basis points which was the largest monthly decline since January 2008.

Treasuries have produced gains each month this quarter far outpacing returns in other fixed income asset classes. To make matters worse with corporate bonds, the bond rating agencies have been adding to the pressure by downgrading a wide range of bonds during the quarter related to the pandemic. Moody's has already downgraded 405 credits year-to-date, marking the highest level in almost a decade.

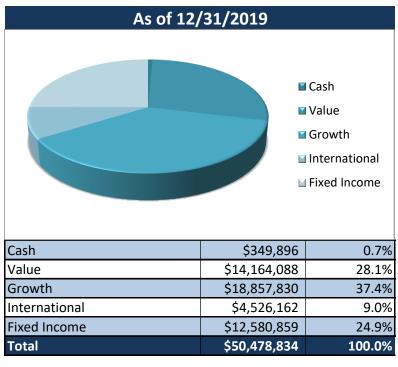

Historic actions taken by the Federal Reserve have started to calm the bond market and opened up better liquidity conditions for investors. However, with the volatility index (VIX) still at considerably high levels, we believe the next few months might present similar challenges to the trading environment of March. We still see tremendous opportunities in countless sectors and markets, but we are cognizant that many industries/companies will come under pressure from this pandemic and investment decisions will be factoring in changes to consumption patterns.
