

Chicken farmer Next door- Nice house though !

Guest: Vik(Upstate NY)

Date of Stay: 03/03/11 Review Submitted: 04/01/11

My husband & I and another couple have rented many homes in Key West. Having said that , we are used to the Rooster population and the flavor that comes with that. We were surprised that not one reviewer mentioned the next door neighbor with several chicken coops, roosters, and 4 dogs that bark at the chickens! We stay out late many nights on vacation and like to sleep in, that was impossible and I actually sleep in ear plugs (my hubby snores). The noise next door would get to a fever pitch about 6 AM and would go on all day. All four of us would tromp downstairs every morning all bleary eyed searching for coffee b/c we could not sleep. We could see this little farm also, as there is not a high fence on that side, and it is NOT pretty . We turned on the pool waterfall to try and drown out some noise, within 12 hours the neighbor , who is a very nice lady asked us to turn it off and leave it off, so we did. :( We have stayed in many homes that are stocked better than this one was considering how many people can actually stay there, what I mean by that is plates, pans, bowls, towels etc. On the happy side, the home is beautifully appointed and is very clean. The owner was efficient and very easy to deal with. Unfortunately we had to come home to rest, it was just way too noisy and I wish someone had made us aware of this beforehand.

Recommended for: Tourists without a car