Marathon, Fl. 33050

Dear Florida Keys Commercial Fisherman's Association,

I am writing to thank you for choosing me to receive the Florida Keys Fisherman's Association scholarship. I was so happy to hear that I was selected as one of the recipients. I am very appreciative and honored to have been chosen to receive this scholarship.

I am currently enrolled in dual seeking degrees which are an AA Degree along with the AS Marine Engineering Degree at FKCC. After I receive these degrees I have plans to go to a State College and get a Bachelor's degree. I have hopes of one day owning and operating my own Marine Mechanic Repair Business if I don't go into the Customs Field and become a Customs Officer. The financial assistance that you have provided will help greatly in paying my educational expenses so that I can focus more on school than having to work more hours to pay for my education.

Thank you again for choosing me and giving me help towards my goal for a college education. I promise you that I will work very hard and earn my degrees at FKCC and then go on and earn my Bachelor's degree at a State College. I Hope to be able to work and live down here in the Keys after I get my college degree so that I can help this great community that has given me so much.

Sincerely,

Cody Dominick

abing fire aboard the Carnival Triumph a year ago.

"I first started cruising in 1965 and certainly I've not seen this level of attention and focus on safety," said Douglas Ward, author of 2014 Berlitz Cruising and Cruise Ships. "I think all the cruise lines are definitely going in the right direction."

Some critics say the changes are more talk than action, but cruise companies and longtime observers say the prolonged attention has led to a safer product and a greater willingness to shine a light on sensitive subjects. Everyone agrees, however, that there is agency drills for embarking passengers before a ship leaves port — which had not happened when Concordia crashed. But other important changes required ships to carry more life vests than required by law and to ensure that crew members have twice-yearly practice loading and operating lifeboats.

The damaged vessel is now slated to be towed from Griglio in June to a port that has not yet been named; it will then be dismantled. The ship's captain at the time of the accident, Francesco Schettino, is on trial for manslaughter, causing a ship-the disaster prompted Carnival Corp. to announce an investment of almost $700 million across its 10 brands to improve fire-safety infrastructure, operating redundancy and backup power. Carnival Cruise Lines alone accounts for more than $300 million in fixes.

Mark Jackson, Carnival Cruise Lines' vice president of technical operations, said additional diesel generators designed to provide emergency backup power will be installed on all 24 ships by the end of January. More fire-suppression systems will be in place by the end of this year.
