Venue Management

Summary

Rams Head has booked over 35 single-day performances and hosted over 25 private, rental, and community events as the contracted management company. Rams Head shows attracted more than 70,000 diverse concertgoers and featured the biggest names in music including ZZ Top, Willie Nelson, Old Dominion and Jimmy Buffett.

In addition, Rams Head has worked with numerous local non-profits and private entities in providing a space for community-driven events such as the Wesley House Lighted Bike Parade, SPCA's Spring Social, and the Key West Literary Seminar.

In 2020, just as the newly built amphitheater was gaining national notoriety, the venue saw a 14-month shutdown due to a global pandemic that halted the music industry, canceling and postponing multiple shows and tours. The shutdown affected the entertainment and booking industry long after the re-opening of venues.

Despite the challenges, Rams Head continues to prove to be a leader in the industry; bringing highly sought-after and diverse entertainment to the island. National artist agents are taking an increasing interest in the Coffee Butler Amphitheater for its boutique-sized capacity, gorgeous gulf views, and professional management team. The Rams Head Group continues to deliver great experiences for artists and customers alike.

Indirect Economic Impact

WHY ARE AMPHITHEATERS BENEFICIAL TO COMMUNITIES?

In many cases, the indirect economic impact outweighs the direct income an amphitheater can provide for a city. Restaurant and hotel owners and employees, local attractions, fishing & water sports, transportation companies and retail establishments all see the benefits of the traveling music fan. Economic impact studies performed in St. Augustine have shown that the average total spending per weighted concert attendee was estimated to be $143.03. Restaurants, lodging and food stores were among the top spending categories.

Almost three quarters of the Coffee Butler Amphitheater's economic impact is dedicated to non-residents bringing new dollars into the City. If we calculated the indirect spending based on St. Augustine's study, one sold out show brings in $371,800 tourist dollars to our local establishments.

Rams Head is proud to support the community in hiring all local staff for security, box office, production, and hospitality service as well as local food and artisan vendors.

"A vibrant music economy drives value for cities in several important ways. It fuels job creation, economic growth, tourism development and artistic growth, and strengthens a city's brand. A strong music community also attracts highly skilled young workers in all sectors for whom quality of life is a priority."

"A 'music city' is defined as a city that embeds music as a tool into its collective governance ethos across economic development, education, tourism, and overall quality of life. Well-known examples include places like Austin, Texas and Nashville, but large cities and small towns alike can become music cities with the right infrastructure and governance mechanisms in place. The economic benefits of becoming a music city are sometimes overlooked, but research indicates that the boost in tourism stimulated by the entertainment industry can yield local job growth and generate positive financial impacts."

Jimmy Buffett Looks at 50 Years After His 1st Key West Gig

The national Rams Head Presents, based in Maryland, with locations in New York, Maryland and Delaware, produces numerous concerts and theatrical performances in the Keys from contemporary and vintage artists and locals at venues like Key West Theater, Key West Amphitheater and Sunset Green. Coming shows include The Mavericks, Max Weinberg's Jukebox, Livingston Taylor, David Sanborn, Rickie Lee Jones, The Four Tops, Colin Hay, Al Stewart and Chris Young.

"The music scene in Key West, let's face it, when I got there in '72, it wasn't a music scene. If you got a job in a bar, that was a music scene," Buffett said. "It's changed a lot and I think most of it for the better.

"And I'm really kind of involved now with the people of Rams Head." Buffett said "They are there for the right reason. We made a deal with our studio to use it more and to connect Shrimp Boat to their existing other studios in Los Angeles and New York. Their ideas are to be able to teach and make it available to local kids who are interested and to local performers. But also to look at their already web of people that record in their studios who would want to come to Key West to record and adding that to the mix.

"For years, there were two or three little theaters in Key West. It always had this great artistic side to it. Back even in the day as far back as the Hemingway days there was always entertainment, so much culture, and Key West has always had that. But music was never at the forefront. It's like handing it off to them and I started it and carry on. I'm glad that I lived to see this and be a part of this coming back," Buffett said.

Marketing

Marketing & Promotions

Rams Head's presence in the media and marketing world is spread between local and national advertising outlets.

Focus was initially spent on prioritizing search engine optimization by developing a website and social media pages to create recognition and drive traffic to the new venue.

Currently, the majority of marketing efforts are placed into digital advertising, including social media, pay-per-click, google ads, and email marketing. Our Key West database continues to cover around 28,000 email subscribers, while our northern database covers around 200,000. With weekly or bi-weekly email blasts to the database, the Coffee Butler Amphitheater name is consistently in the inboxes of Key West locals & visitors alike. Social Media continues to organically and affordably connect with our market.

Radio and print remain an important outlet in the regional markets and our Street Team continues to gain strength in both size and exposure throughout the Keys.

As we look towards the future, Rams Head will continue to be a leading provider of sought after entertainment, providing a destination for visitors and locals alike. Diversity in ethnicity and age demographic continue to be a focal point for the waterfront amphitheater. We will continue to push marketing efforts nationally to gain recognition as a destination venue, as well as work closely with community organizers and local non-profits.

Rams Head's commitment to work with other attractions, retailers and hotels is a mainstay in our marketing and promotional efforts. The involvement of the business and residential communities is imperative to each year's success. We strive for new ways to involve cross promotional efforts in order to leverage the Coffee Butler Amphitheater in the community.
