Subject: 24-5399 - Text Amendment of the Land Development Regulations - A ordinance to the City Commission to invoke the Zoning in Progress Doctrine declaring that the City is considering amendments to the Land Development Regulations to adopt inclusionary affordable and workforce housing standards for commercial properties along with additional measures to promote housing opportunities for local workers and those in need of affordable and workforce housing opportunities; Directing Building and Planning Department staff to defer the acceptance and processing of applications associated with the Limited Commercial (CL) and/or General Commercial (CG) Districts whose construction costs meet or exceed $500,000.00 in value as determined by the Chief Building Official; continuing this policy until new permit requirements and/or amended Land Development Regulations are adopted by the City Commission or until after the passage of 180 days from the date of this ordinance, whichever occurs first; providing for severability; providing for repeal of inconsistent provisions; providing for an effective date.

Introduction

The text amendment would authorize the invoking of the Zoning in Progress Doctrine and permit the City Commission to consider amendments to the Land Development Regulations to better address the City's affordable and workforce housing needs.

Background

The City of Key West is uniquely limited in its efforts to meet local housing needs. Like other coastal communities, the City of Key West is geographically limited in its ability to grow. In addition, the City has a finite capacity for growth based upon a series of environmental constraints including groundwater capacity, wastewater capacity, threatened and endangered habitat types, traffic capacity associated with hurricane evacuation...etc. Most importantly, the State has designated the City of Key West and the entire Florida Keys as an “Area of Critical State Concern.”

The designation of the City of Key West as an Area of Critical State Concern has included limitations on the number of new market rate and affordable housing units that can be constructed within the City. The most recent allocation of development permits included 921 market rate and affordable housing units in 2003 with 91 units in each of the following ten years. It is expected that the City will issue its last allocations in the 2024 allocation cycle.

Finally, the City of Key West is home to the largest Historic Preservation District in the State of Florida. Development within the City’s Historic District is further limited by design guidelines that have been adopted by the City and approved by the State Historic Preservation Office – commonly referred to as the Florida Division of Historic Resources.

Taken together, these limitations make the development of affordable and workforce housing particularly challenging in the City of Key West. Growth restrictions tied to the Area of Critical State Concern prevent the City from promoting the development of higher density housing patterns through incentive-based zoning strategies. At the same time, environmental and geographic constraints have historically limited both the location and density of housing.

Staff Analysis:

The Zoning in Progress Doctrine has been used in the past by the City Commission to address ongoing development trends. Most recently, the Doctrine was invoked in order to address the development of pain clinics and their associated impacts throughout the region.

Under the Zoning in Progress Doctrine, the City is provided a period of time to develop regulatory controls to better meet ongoing challenges. In this instance, the development of affordable and workforce housing represents the single biggest challenge facing the City and Keys region as a whole. It is anticipated that Planning staff, working in cooperation with the City Attorney’s Office, the Building Department, and other departments will develop additional strategies to address ongoing housing shortfalls. Under particular consideration is the development of inclusionary non-residential (commercial) affordable and workforce housing policies. Similar inclusionary non-residential or commercial programs already exist in Monroe County and the Village of Islamorada.

It is anticipated that the initial period under consideration will be six (6) months. The intent is to move quickly in order to minimize the impact on individual property owners to the greatest extent possible.

Recommendation:

The development of affordable and workforce housing opportunities is the single biggest challenge facing the City. In addition to meeting the needs of local residents, the provision of affordable and workforce housing is critical to the health of the local tourist economy. Absent the ability to attract and retain high-skilled local workers, the resort industry, restaurant, and retail sectors of the economy will suffer. In addition, the region's multi-billion-dollar marine economy is dependent on its ability to both attract and retain workers.

The Planning Board, after due public hearing, recommended to DENY the invoking of the Zoning in Progress Doctrine to the City Commission. The Planning Board stressed the need to develop needed amendments to the City's existing affordable and workforce housing code without any delay in the processing of individual development permits.

Planning staff recognizes the potential impacts associated with the delay of development applications. However, the City's ongoing affordable and workforce housing crisis impacts nearly every aspect of life within the City. A lack of housing opportunities has forced residents to flee the region and it has adversely impacted local businesses, which continue to struggle to find workers. Emergency service personnel, members of the law enforcement community, nurses, doctors, and every type of public sector worker struggles with a lack of housing. A short pause in the review of a limited scope of development projects can help to provide staff with the critical time needed to develop potential solutions. Such a pause in the review of applications can also prevent a potential run on permits as property owners seek to avoid any new regulatory controls. It is noted that Planning staff have already commenced work on amending the Code and that the length and scope of the Zoning in Progress Doctrine will be limited.

Respectfully submitted to the City Commission for use in making its determination.
