Hi Sue.

Good morning,

I am not in until this afternoon today, due to the Board meeting, and am not certain how to address this request by the Chair. I can forward it to everyone, but does it also need to go on the Agenda? I can create a file this afternoon if so, or perhaps it would be added afterward with the minutes?

Thank you for your support and guidance.

Best regards,

Vicki

Hi, Richard, I know you are busy as always! We continue to enjoy the Restaurant Store and Colez Peace, and manage to hit the occasional Artisan Fair, but it's hard to get away from the boat! Lee mentioned that he had spoken to you about Art in Public Places considering the donation of the Martini sculpture "Orange Head", perhaps for use at the Truman Waterfront. I've forwarded an earlier email which gives details and photos of the piece.

We would be happy to have the piece cleaned and freshened for you, and could possibly arrange inside storage until you would be ready to place it.

We'd be delighted if this donation could be considered, and would appreciate hearing from someone at AIPP of any interest.

Good afternoon, Marianne and Melissa:

To follow up on our earlier emails regarding a proposed donation to the Art in Public Places Board from Lee McMannis and myself, I can advise as follows:

1. The item proposed to be donated is a steel sculpture by John Martini, titled "Orange Head". It has been on display at 540 Greene Street during the time I owned the retail complex. The property has been sold and the sculpture was not sold as part of the transaction. The sculpture was displayed to instill a bit of enjoyment and humor to the area and provide a sense of place. It is a clue in a historic scavenger hunt on the island, and is known and photographed by numerous residents and visitors to the island.
2. The sculpture was created by John Martini c. 2007 in his studio on Emma Street (the original African American movie theatre) here on the island, and utilized one of the last steel i-beams discarded by the Navy that were characteristic of John's earlier sculptures. It features one of the artist's thematic, iconic and enigmatic heads mounted on a platform presented on an i-beam.
3. My husband and I are strong believers in public art, and purchased the piece on May 1, 2008, specifically for public display to create an oasis atmosphere in front of the 540 Greene St. retail complex.

4. This piece is a classic piece of Martini's work, and illustrative of his transitions to larger, precisely balanced pieces. It is truly a treasure, and deserves to be on public display, perhaps in the new Waterfront Park, or other small public area where it can continue to be enjoyed by all of us on the island. The sculpture is roughly 11 feet tall, and stands on a 20" square steel base.

A photo is attached for your reference (and enjoyment).

Please let me know if I can provide you with any additional information before the Art in Public Places Board meeting on March 7, or if it would be helpful for Lee and me to attend the meeting. Unfortunately, the "Orange Head" is too large to bring along.

All best,

Sandra McMannis

Hi Sandra,

I hope you and Lee are doing well. My apologies I haven't been in touch sooner but I haven't forgotten what we spoke about.

There is a procedure with the city to accept any works of art and it would be a great help if you could help me with the following information to present to the city and the board:

- What is the object and for what purpose is or was it used?
- When, where, and by whom was it created?
- When and under what circumstances did you come to own it (gift, purchase, inheritance, etc)?
- Any other information that might be relevant to the object's fabrication, use, or ownership history

Melissa Paul-Leto (cc'd on this message) will be your contact within the city. The board has their next meeting on March 7th during which we will hopefully be able to decide whether or not to accept to your generous offer.

Talk soon and thank you,

Marianne
